

Two passions during my academic career have always been economics and helping people. During college I had the opportunity to work at a water park during the summer, and the amount of people that I was able to help have a memorable experience was remarkable. It made me realize the importance of theme park workers and how vital it is to maintain those parks due to how dearly people love them. With economics I have gained the skill sets needed to actually be able to assist in helping these parks function. I have gained a great sense of adaptability in working with data software, as well as a particular adeptness for teamwork and communication. Having gained experience in both the public and private sectors, I am practiced in working with data from a variety of different environments. Additionally, the project work I have done in the past has prepared me for large-scale team assignments in examining the impact of long-term decisions. I am confident that the array of skills I have to offer, coupled with my experience and passion for theme parks will make me a great fit for the Disney workplace.
